

FACULTY OF HUMANITIES

International Vocational Education (M.Sc.)

The master's programme International Vocational Education is a dual degree course in cooperation with the Anglia Ruskin University Chelmsford/Cambridge. It prepares the students for higher (or senior) positions in the field of education and further education (e.g. in European vocational education institutions or economic educational institutions), especially in an international context. Positions in the field of training aids, the science of vocational education or in the international development cooperation can also be pursued. The master's degree assures that the students gain the necessary knowledge in the core modules such as vocational training and didactics as well as management and evaluation of international vocational training projects to guarantee an adequate transition into the professional practice.
